

Sex workers face disproportionate levels of intersectional violence from criminals, the state, and society as a whole. This is exacerbated by stigma, and reinforced through punitive, ill-informed and disempowering policies which fail to recognise their personhood, autonomy and needs for safety.

We provide the following free sex worker-informed services:

- UK-wide victim/survivor support services that facilitate greater access to justice and healing
- Emergency resources for those fleeing violence and at risk of survival sex work
- A digital reporting and alerting system and screening tools
- On- and offline sex worker-only spaces
- Affirming, sex worker-friendly mental health support services and paid therapy packages
- Career exploration support
- Safety information, advocacy, community education, and sex worker-centred community-based research

Adults of all genders, identities and types of work in sex industries can become members of NUM for access to our safety tools, and to help design, deliver and improve our services.

International Day to End Violence Against Sex Workers

DO MORE THAN SAY THEIR NAMES

17th December 2023 marks the 20th International Day To End Violence Against Sex Workers (IDEVASW), where sex workers and allies worldwide come together to mourn, honour and pay respects to those we have lost.

It has been 20 years since IDEVASW began in Seattle, and still sex workers around the world are demanding equal rights, justice and respect. Sex workers still face disproportionate levels of harm and violence, perpetrated by individuals and by the state. The conditions which exclude sex workers from society, which prevent them from achieving justice, which keep their voices suppressed, have to end. Without this, the stigma and discrimination which allows this violence to occur will persist. All forms of oppression must all be eradicated if we are to achieve justice for sex workers, and for all of us.

As always, we invite you to say their names with us, but we also ask you to do more: Listen to sex workers. Support and uplift their voices. Donate. Refuse to stay silent in the face of injustice. Work with sex workers to eliminate the social conditions and the harmful policies that limit their lives. Only then will the violence cease.

We also recognise and remember all sex workers who have been murdered during the course of their work, but whose names have not been made public, along with those whose lives have been lost as the result of the stigma, marginalisation and other forms of violence against sex workers that permeates our society.

MAY THEY REST IN POWER.
